WHAT'S IN A NAME?

of the Peculiarities of the New Chlengo Directory.

If you want to spend half an hour in pleasant research that will not tax the brain too much and will yield all sorts of mild amusement, take down the city directory and amble through the pages. The more aimlessly you do it the better.

After striking the name of Ek Swan, a Pullman Company foreman, and wondering if he has a swan neck, you might hit the word "Goodman." This naturally lends you to Good Fellow, and in a moment or two you find that Mr. Good Earl is a subsenkeeper and Charles Good Luck is a milesinkeeper and Charles Good Luck a laborer, and therefore presumably not very hicky. Mr. Good Enough is prob-ably a good enough kind of janitor. The name "Good" of course draws you to ad-jectives of a comparative nature, and you turn up Stephen Badder, a wood finisher, and after that Anthony Worst, an engraver.

Nationalities are plentiful as blackberries, and very little digging brings to light treasures from every land. A detective sergeant is burdened with the name of William Spain, August Russia is a la-borer, and F. W. German a stenographer william Spain, August Russia is a laborer, and F. W. German a stenographer. Percy England is employed as a cierk in Armour's packing-house, and Leo Austrian is the advertising agent for a German daily. Then comes Gustavus Sweden, a painter. Charles Saxon is a cierk, Louis Ireland a dentist, Harry France a brook manufacturer, and Frank Italia, Instead of finding his groove as a fruit vender, is a stenceutter. All the rest are there, from Norway to Brazil.

For an appetizer turn to a few bills of fare and you will quickly be able to light on a meal fit for the most dainty palate. If you are partial to fish you can partake of Salmon, Sturgeon, Herring, and many other varieties; if to meat or fow, then feast yourself on Birds of all kinds, Venson, Steak, or Ham, with a few Sandwiches thrown in. As a relish you may gather up John Mustard or Abbie J. Mace, both physicians, or Patrick Pepper, a confectioner; Leon Spice, President of the Economy Plate Company; Frank Salt, a pipe flitter, or Charles Cinamon, an architect. There are all sorts of Herbs to choose from, and, to round off the meal, you can find Ples and Drinks inaumerable, while Glasses, Silver, Lights, Tapers, Lemons, Apples, and even a few Mangoes are there for the asking.

Try another tack and lo, you discover Mr. Trick, secretary of a brewing company: Lave Ruse, a bartender; Dan Device, a confectioner, and John Scheme, proprietor of a saloon.

Do you desire to indulge in a game of golf? Why, certainly. In a few seconds you can make the proxy acquamance of Frank Niblick, a cigar maker; Joseph Putter, a grocer; Edward Links, a waiter, and ass for Greens, why, you have the most bewildering choice imaginable.

If golf has not yet caught you and you are still floundering along in the baseball procession, you will find that in this direction too, the directory deals with you are still floundering along in the baseball procession, you will find that in this direction too, the directory deals with you in a kindly manner. Dismissing several pages of the immortal weather too tropical? Revel in Is the weather too tropical? Revel in reading over the name of Miss Sarah Cool, a stenographer, or a gentleman who goes her one better—Charles Colder, Atter welcoming the relief that comes by looking over a whole page of Frosts you may discover Simon R. Freeze, a harnessmaker, and Jacob Ice, a baker. How is it that people with names like this never appear in the lists of heated-term prostrations?

er appear in the lists of heated-term prostrations?

Has the experience chilled you? There is a speedy remedy at hand. Again a stenographer comes to the rescue, this time Miss Cora D. Summer. Albert Warming is a turner and Alexander Warmus a laborer. If you seek further still you come across Frank Hotter, a bricklayer, and Joseph Heater, a cooper.

The materials for a pleasant indulgence with the Weed are at hand. Appropriately enough, Clarence Pipe is a firemin, and it is just as fitting that we should find a lumberman in John Match. Miss Mary Cigale is a dressmaker, John Tobaka, a laborer and Judson L. Smoke, a motorman.

laborer and Judson L. Smoke, a motorman.

High and mighty titles abound in this all-embracing volume, and wherever his fancy carries the investigator he finds something to reward his industry. John King and Edward Sovereign naturally lead off. Louise Czar keeps a shooting gallery, though there is nothing to indicate from this that he is a nihilist. Harry Sultan runs a sewing machine agency and Dan Empercy is foreman of a foundry. Then comes Mrs. Clara Dook. Martin Knight has a lunch counter and a haughty Baron keeps a saloon. A plain Squire carns his wages in a railway tower, and there are Workmen and Drudges in alundance. Coming down to still more plebeian things, you can find three people rejoicing in the name of Mudd.
while persons whose name is Deanis are as plentiful as the Sands or the Seas.—
